De Gaulle Proposes World Atomic Hopes Soar Powers Destroy Nuclear Weapons For Algeria Cease-Fire

French Leader Urges Delivery System Control

PARIS (AP) - President Charles de Gaulle called Monday for the destruction of existing nuclear weapons stocks, and urged a conference of major powers on destruction or control of nuclear weapons delivery systems.

The French president, replying to Soviet Premier Khrushchev, coldly ignored the Soviet leader's proposal for a summit conference on disarmament, and merely said France is ready to discuss destruction, banning and control weapons delivery systems. Khrushchev had proposed a disarmament meeting of the heads of 18 nations in Geneva on March

Perhaps with Red China in mind, De Gaulle said discussions on nuclear disarmament should be limited to the four nuclear powers-Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United States -and those states which might soon have nuclear weapons at their disposal.

The text of De Gaulle's letter, delivered Sunday in Moscow, was released Monday by the French Foreign Ministry. In it, De Gaulle said that to achieve real disarmament, nations should concentrate on the destruction of existing weapons stocks, coupled with a ban on further construction of those weapons.

This has been a long-standing policy of France, which entered the atomic race late and is lagging far behind the United States and the Soviet Union in the dearent was a soviet Union velopment of nuclear weapons.

MRS. GOLDMAN FINDS PHONE SAVES 21 HOURS OF TIME AND TRAVEL IN TWO WEEKS

Mrs. Daniel Goldman, of Baltimore, recently completed a two-week "diary" of her family's telephone calls. For each call she also estimated the amount of time, travel and money that was saved by telephoning. At the end of two weeks, the Goldmans' telephone diary showed savings of 21 valuable hours, 293 miles of travel and $22.38.

Mrs. Goldman, who is the mother of four young children (all under ten years) and is active in charitable and community affairs, finds her telephone invaluable. She says, "I don't think our family could accomplish two-thirds of the things we do without the telephone."

What would a telephone diary show in your home? You'd probably find, too, that your phone

The Government Stockpile Mess

Stockpiling of strategic materials by the government, which will be investigated by Congress, began after World War II when the nation obviously needed vital materials, such as metals, which cannot be produced domestically in sufficient supply. The several Congresses since that time and the Presidents have supported the program.

As is usual with government management of a program, however, the tendency is toward over-accumulation. The Eisenhower administration recognized that too much had been acquired and attempted to get rid of some of the excess

That raised a furore among domestic suppliers who feared a price crash when the government began dumping. Even some of our allies, who have been profiting by sales to the U.S., protested.

What the operation amounts to now is a subsidy for a few who are dependent upon an ample and stable market for their products. That subsidy has become far too costly.

Hindsight suggests that the government would have done better to order supplies as needed and then quit buying as soon as quotas were filled. That would have been of minimum disturbance to markets. Even now the need to quit buying is strongly suggested by an accumulation of $347 million worth of aluminum beyond any possible national need for years to

The investigation will show government fumbling on a distressing scale. If government managers do not know when to stop an operation, they had better not start.

Unity Of West Europe

Never since the Congress of Vienna (1815) has Western Europe been closer to unity than at the present time. It has been characteristic of Europe to split up as Asia and Africa are permitting themselves to be split into all sorts of small countries. It is to be called that prior to the advent of Napoleon. Europe was broken into little principalities and baronies, the final leavings of feudalism. Napoleon's political genius was his reorganization of Europe into larger states and the abolition of the small countries.

After the Congress of Vienna, the countries of Europe strengthened their colonial possessions and managed to maintain the peace of the world for nearly a century, although some small wars did affect all countries. The nationalistic revolutions which occurred in the 1830s and in 1848 actually enlarged the European countries, such a nation as Italy and eventually Germany coming into existence, although the Austro-Hungarian Empire fell apart. By 1914, Europe was again ready for war and disunion.

For nearly half a century, Western Europe has been pressed between the United States and Russia in this terrific conflict between unification and disunity. The League of Nations, following World War I, was a conception of unity that petered out because of African resistance to Europe (the Ethiopian War) and American opposition to the growth of the Japanese Empire.

Then came World War II and the emergence of the nations of Asia and Africa to equality with the nations of Europe. In this, Soviet Russia and the United States played the identical roles of lessening the power of Western Europe, the United States building an enormous economic power which set out to weaken the authority of the growing countries of Western Europe, while Russia sought to build a new imperialism in the Eurasian world that would ultimately reduce Western Europe to a secondary position. Russia as an Asiatic power sought to destroy the political and economic power of Great Britain, France, Holland, Spain, Portugal and Japan; the United States, as a non-imperialistic power, devoted solely to economic development and expansion, found no reason to limit

Thus, the end of World War II found European countries made smaller by the pressure of the two giants until Europe felt itself altogether pushed out of the world picture. With startling resilience, Europe responded to rebuilding itself, first by creating the Common Market as an economic force and now under the leadership of De Gaulle and Adenauer the probability of the building of a political as well as economic unity which will unify Western Europe into a population and economic complex equal to the United States and Soviet Russia. This will change the historical picture of modern Europe.

Meanwhile both Africa and Asia are being fragmented. Large colonial countries have been broken up into smaller states and their economies suffer from the loss of unification. Fragmentation means increased poverty and civil war. It means loss of population, lessening productivity and purchasing power. Thus, Western Europe is moving in the direction of growth, while Africa and Asia are moving toward increasing confusion.

This is the picture of the moment and while it cannot be said that the United Nations is sufficiently strong to meet the challenge of the moment, it can be said that so far as Western Europe is concerned, sharp progress is being made. If we include the United States and Great Britain into the Western European complex of peoples much has been accomplished since 1945 toward rebuilding the Western world.

It is very easy to become discouraged by statistical data. On the other hand, it is surprising how swiftly the human race responds to immediate developments. Before the Common Market, we had no device to pull Western Europe together; before the advent of De Gaulle, it seemed as though Germany and France would never join forces for the rebuilding of a European society; when the last Summit Conference collapsed and Eisenhower returned to the United States humiliated by Khrushchev there seemed no hope of meeting the Moskovite.

Yet today the West is stronger and grows stronger every day because it has a resilient, meaningful program and even in our own country, the people speak a new and more hopeful language.

These changes do not occur by accident. They represent the ebb and flow of history. We are no

Beginning Of An Important Ending In Laos

One of the decisive moments of President Kennedy's first year in office was his meeting, on April 27, with all the Congressional leaders of both political

WASHINGTON

The topic was the dangerous situation in remote, beleaguered little Laos. The question was whether to use the final remedywhether to commit American forces in Laos, as the President had half-indicated he might do at his grim earlier press conference devoted to the Laos crisis.

From all the leaders of both parties, from Sen. Bridges as well as Sen. Mansfield, from Rep. Halleck as well as Speaker Rayburn, the President received the same emphatic advice. Perhaps the advice would have been less unanimous if the President had begun by suggesting that troops ought to be sent, instead of outlining the choices in Laos with cool clarity. But as it was, every man present, Republican or Democrat, strongly opposed any commitment of American military forces in Laos.

Another White House meeting of the same sort may now be anticipated. But the gathering on April 27 will almost certainly be better remembered by the historians. For, in a very special way, this was the beginning of an important ending. The ending itself now seems to be close at

What is ending is the long, costly American attempt to insure the denial of Laos to the Communists, by a solid, reinforcing American presence. The slowmotion crisis there is coming to a head: and after much painful pondering, the Kennedy administration has evidently chosen the course of disengagement in Laos.

Two parallel processes have helped to produce this exceptionally significant result. On the one hand, confidence in the capabilities of the anti-Communist Royal Laotian Army has steadily declined. The army has increased in size, but not in fighting power, if one can judge by its reported performance in its constant petty engagements with the pro-ComBy Joseph Alsop

On the other hand, estimates of enemy capabilities have been revised upwards. Speaking only of the North Vietnamese troops now in Laos, the number believed to be present has risen from about 5,000 last spring to about 10,000 today, with approximately half of the total in regular battalions. In the last report in this space, the change of estimate was stated to result from troop movements into Laos in the last three months. In reality, only about 1,000 North Vietnamese entered as recently as this. But the key point is not when these invaders arrived in Laos; the key point is that they are known to be there, and their presence naturally causes a grav- leaders last April.

munist forces. Thus it is rated er view to be taken. Add that the theoretical cease-fire in Laos is becoming increasingly "frayed," as the President has put it. The sum is ugly. With a renewal of hostilities more and more difficult to rule out, a final defeat of the Communist forces has also come to seem more and more unlikely if hostilities are renewed. And this is true, despite all the American aid that has been lavished on the Royal Laotian Army.

For these unpalatable reasons, in turn, the range of choices has progressively narrowed. If the administration is correct, in fact, there are now only two courses to choose from in Laos. One is the course of full engagement, by sending American troops, which was put up to the Congressional ODD MAIL - Most members of congress try to use their mail as a means of keeping in touch with sentiment in their districts on matters of current interest. They maintain sizable, energetic staffs to make sure that no constituent's letter goes unanswered. It's drudgery but a necessary part of the game of politics.

However, the mail received by some would strain the patience of a saint. A couple of recent examples from the mail of Sen. Harrison A. Williams, New Jersey Democrat, will suffice.

The other day, Williams received a letter from a New Jersey resident, which read in its entirety: "My vote is me." No one in Williams' office has yet figured out how to answer it.

Another New Jersey resident rencently wrote: "Some time ago I wrote to President Kennedy re his reported interest in flights to the Moon, in which I have no interest whatever. I received a reply from an organization - the Both are self defeating."

'National Aeronautics and Space Administration.' Will you let me know if the organization is a new branch of the government, or what on earth it is, and how supported?"

That fellow will get a reply, but we somehow think it won't help him out of his basic dilemma.

Rep. Richard H. Poff. a Virginia Republican, recently laid down some simple rules for any of his constituents who want to communicate with him. He said: a letter is better than a phone call, make your letter brief, confine comments to one subject, and outline reasons for your posi-

Poff also advised his voters: "Don't insult your Congressman with promises or threats. A Congressman is a human being, and most are earnestly trying to do the right thing. A promise signifies the writer's belief that the Congressman can be bought; a threat, that he can be scared.

Despite the prospect of Congressional opposition, serious consideration might have been given to sending troops into Laos, even at this late date, if the enterprise had been expected to be profitable. But the Joint Chiefs of Staff would only guarantee to hold the Mekong River towns, with an expeditionary force of the size considered manageable. Thus the retention of mere footholds on Lao's western river-border with Thailand was made to seem the maximum reward of full American en-This explains the choice of disengagement. The sign that this is the choice is the renewed cut-off of the $3,000,000-a-month U. S. cash subsidy to the Laotian gov-

Cutting off the subsidy was the lever used once before, to force the anti-Communist Laotian leaders, Prince Boun Oum and Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, to go to Geneva and negotiate with the neutralist Prime Minister-designate, Prince Souvanna Phouma, and his Communist brother. Prince Souphanouvong. They went to Geneva as promised, but the negotiations ended nowhere.

Now, however, the American government is apparently determined to withhold financial support until the negotiations produce the desired result. This means the formation of an all-party ministry, headed by Prince Souvanna Phouma, on the basis of a "neutralist" policy. For this purpose, the anti-Communists, Phoumi and Boun Oum, are being asked to give up the Defense and Interior ministries, which means, in effect, giving up anti-Communist control of the army, and the

The immediate question is whether the financial level will be strong enough to force Phoumi and Boun Oum to go this far. It will not be easy, and the already phantasmagorical cease-fire may deteriorate into open hostilities before Phoumi and Boun Oum yield. But this last problem is as thorny as it is grave; and its other aspects must be considered in a later report.

Saud Blasts Nasser

Not much has leaked out regarding the conference between President Kennedy and King Saud of Saudi Arabia, but one surprising development was a diatribe that the wealthiest king in the world delivered against his old ally, President Nasser of Egypt. The two were once close friends and allies. Saud even lent Nasser $200 .-000,000 of oil royalties which he collected in advance from the Arabian American Oil Company in order to fight Israel and buck the British over the Suez Canal. But recently Saud has felt that Nasser was playing footsie with Moscow while simultaneously trying to curry favor with the West, and that he was not to be trusted.

His explosion against Nasser to Kennedy was vigorous and vitri-

The Great Game Of Politics

There have been some great politicians in the White House. Calvin Coolidge, a Republican; Franklin D. Roosevelt, and now John F. Kennedy is the latest political past-master.

A lot of people think politics is dirty business. But at the Detroit dinner in which the Jews paid tribute to an Arab, I heard that Arab, Councilman Saide, give the best description of politics I ever heard.

Saide is a man who worked his way up from the precinct level. He said: "You hear uncomplimentary things said about politicians. The dictionary says 'politics is the science of civil governments and a politician is one skilled in political science." We workers in the political vineyards know politics as the hard work of ringing doorbells, passing out literature in the rain and cold, of neglecting our private business or spending far less time with our families than we would wish, of being rebuffed and insulted. sometimes of being victims of vicious lies.

"Many good citizens abhor politics as a dirty game and expect our vast complex government to run itself. They wonder why we stay in politics.

Sometimes we wonder ourselves. But down deep in our hearts we know. We know that with the success of civil government politics is a noble profession and the moral responsibility of everyone who loves his country. We know that without strong, active, dedicated politicians every precinct worker to President, we could not enjoy the benefits of our beloved country for a week."

So spoke Sam Saide, the politician son of an Arab who worked his way up to be a city councilman of highland Park, Mich.

RIO DE JANEIRO

"I don't know whether it's more hazardous to travel by foot or by car." a friend told me in Buenos Aires. Both are extremely dangerous in B. A., not because the Argentines are bad drivers exactly, but because temperamentally they are very different from Anglo-Saxons. Just as we'll never understand their politics, we are not likely to understand their driving. Driving is a means of transportation, of course, as it is in the United States, but it's much more than that; it's a game, a sport, a test of one's manhood, one's courage, one's - well, they have another word for it in Latin Ameirca which wouldn't do at all in a family newspaper.

About the only word of advice I can give you timid Anglo-Saxons (you Anglo Saxons - I've gone native) is for Heaven's sake be careful crossing streets. But how? Buenos Aires streets (I realize this column has a Rio de Janeiro dateline but be patient, we'll get to that city in a minute) like those in Paris are frequently the junctions of three streets and, since the Argentines have not yet been cursed with one-way traffic, that means that cars are bearing down on you from six different angles and there are no traffic lights (there are only about six traffic lights in all of Buenos Aires, which is the eighth largest city in the world). Or let's put it another way. Just suppose Columbus Circle had no traffic lights. All the streets and avenues converging were two-way streets. It's 5:30 in the afternoon and you, a pedestrian, are trying to cross from Eighth Avenue right across the center of the Circle to Central Park. Madness, you say. Well, that's what crossing some of the intersections here is like. You check five directions and venture out almost to be tion, gastrointestinal disorders, crushed by a truck on the one way you forgot. I defy anyone to look in six directions at once. There's an intersection near my hotel I tried to cross for twelve minutes. I'd venture out, scuttle back. I'd just about resigned myself to never getting across that street, to perhaps spending the rest of my life in Argentina, when I saw a child of six get across. How did he do it? Guts, man, guts. He just walked firmly out there in that maalstrom, chin up, eyes scowling, and defied them to run him over. There was screeching of rubber against cement, a few Latin curses, but he made it. Of course, they lose more sixyear-old children that way, but the more formidable ones survive. Anyhow, if that little child did it. I had to try, and I made it too. Of course, I'd never do it again. If I have to take the long way around through Uruguay, I'll never cross that street again. I asked a man at the Foreign Office about how cars fight their way through these triple intersections. Other newspapermen they both lose. here consult the Foreign Office (c) 1962 New York Herald Tribune Inc.

about different type things: like why did Foreign Minister Carcano vote the way he did at Punta del Este, but I'm interested in more basic things. How the hell do you get across the street? He took me for a drive to show me how it was done. You plunge into an intersection. Another car on the intersecting street plunges right at you. Someone has to give way. Both cars jam right at each other. I hold my breath. At the last moment the other car slams on his brakes. We slip triumphantly through.

"The front of his car dipped," said my friend, still flushed with his victory. "That means he had his foot on the brake a little bit. His nerve was cracking. You must keep your eyes on the front of the car. That's the tipoff."

"But suppose it doesn't dip?" I asked. He shrugged. "Then there's a crash. There are many crashes, but then I suppose there are not any more of them than in New York which is full of traffic lights and timid Anglo-Saxons."

You must realize that these contests of will, of nerve, of sheer bravado, are not necessarily just between two drivers. On the bigger intersections a man has to face down not merely one driver but maybe six different drivers, one after another, never slowing down, never touching that symbol of Anglo-Saxon prudence, the brake, at all. (It is permissible to swerve a bit around six-year-old children, but braking is definitely bar form, like moving the feet in a bull fight.)

Now we arrive at beautiful Rio de Janeiro (I told you we'd get here eventually). Rio is full of traffic lights, but who pays attention to traffic lights? The wildest drivers in Rio drive the latacaos, which are little busses. The latacao drivers like to fill up their busses and then drive hell-bent for election to the end of the line, stopping for nothing - passengers, traffic cops, traffic lights, small children. There's a police crack-down in process against these lunatics right now and the latacao drivers got so angry at being arrested that they are threatening to strike. Police Chief Segadas Viana has protested that his men are not being especially severe. In fact, the cops are arresting bus drivers only if they commit nine violations of the traffic laws. In one trip, you can hardly be more tolerant than that. If a bus driver commits nine violations, he is hustled off to police headquarters where among other things his eyesight and his mental health are tested.

Brazilian teenagers have their own lighthearted game on the roads, a form of Russian roulette. Along about one in the morning, with a few drinks under their belts, they steal cars and then race them as fast as they will go through intersections. If another teenager is playing the same intersection at the same time, well,

Heart Research Is Beginning To Pay Off

Many persons with high blood pressure develop enlargement of the left ventricle which pumps blood into the arterial system.

Four valves guard the entrance and exit of the two ventricles of the heart. The blood makes typical sounds as it passes through these openings, and if they are too narrow or cannot close properly, the sounds change (murmurs). This occurs when valves are scarred through an infection such as rheumatic fever (rheumatic heart disease) or are deformed as a result of a developmental defect prior to birth (congenital heart disease).

There are many other causes of heart disease, but those involving the coronary arteries, muscles, and valves constitute more than 95 per cent of cardiac disorders. At the turn of the century most medical men diagnosed all ailments of the pumping apparatus simply as heart disease. They made no attempt to determine the type, cause, and severity of the affliction. # Keyser Beats Beall, 79-60, Ends PVC Season With 14-0 Record

WON 'EM ALL IN PVC - Keyser High School, coached by Estle "Eck" Miers, completed its Potomac Valley Conference basketball season last night with a 14-0 record by defeating the Beall High Mountaineers at Frostburg, 79-60. The final outcome of the race hinges on the LaSalle at Beall game Tuesday, February 27. If LaSalle, now 7-0, wins its final game it will share the title with Keyser. The overall record of Keyser is now 17-3. The Golden Tornado winds up its rgeular season Wednesday at Bruce High School. The Keyser squad pictured above, left to right: FRONT ROW - Roger Shallis, Paul Loughry, "Chuck" Norrington, Tommy Condron, Don Slater and Don Harmon. BACK ROW - George Alkire, Charles Nelson, Richard Criser, Bill Thomas, Glenn Miller, Woodrow Kesecker and Terry Turbin. Keyser swept the Beall series, winning the first game, 64-42.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Favors Proposal David Scull, seeking the Repubgubernatorial nomination told the executive board of the County Federation of Republican Women Monday that he favored state office for urban affairs.

'This would be useful in many ways," Scull said. "It would be able to guard against future federal encroachment into spheres of local responsibility.

"I am a firm believer in states" rights," the Republican candidate continued, "but I am equally determined to match that belief with positive action in meeting the responsibilities that go with it."
